Advancing conservation practice and heritage community: International projects and long-term commitments at the Getty Conservation Institute

Elena Macchioni

Associate Project Specialist at Getty Conservation Institute With Margherita Rago, current GCI Graduate Intern

Through examples of some ongoing international projects in the Americas and Asia, the lecture aims at presenting the approach to heritage conservation of the Getty Conservation Institute (GCI). The GCI works to advance conservation practice, serving the conservation community and aiming to benefit civil society at large. The Institute's endeavors are achieved through partnerships with international organizations and authorities, collaboration with local stakeholders, as well as long-term commitment to sites' stewards. Following the lecture, current GCI Graduate Interns with the Earthen Architecture Initiative Alessandra Sprega and Margherita Rago will describe the graduate internship program and present their work at the Institute in the past year.
